Validation Therapy

Speaker

Naomi Feil, M.S.,
A.C.S.W.

Ms. Feil grew up in the Montefiore Home for the Aged in Cleveland, Ohio where her father was the administrator and her mother was the social worker. After earning a Master's Degree in Social Work from Columbia University, Ms. Feil lived and worked as a group worker in New York City; she also was an actress in off-Broadway theaters. She returned to Cleveland in 1963 to work with the aged. Ms. Feil began the Validation Method in response to her dissatisfaction with traditional methods of working with the severely disoriented old-old people. She developed the method with residents of nursing homes and with patients in hospitals. She uses her acting skills to teach empathy with disoriented old-old, now called "Alzheimer-Type" dementia.

Intended Audience

This program is intended for physicians, registered nurses, nursing assistants, social workers, discharge planners, nursing home and assisted living administrators, recreational therapists, activity directors, home health professionals, occupational therapists, and anyone caring for or helping someone who is caring for the disoriented or mentally frail elderly.

Program Objectives

Upon completion of the program, participants will:

- List physical and psychological factors leading to change in the elderly.
- Experience an awareness of yourself and others.
- Differentiate the phases of disorientation in the elderly.
- Identify specific validation helping techniques.
- Formulate ways to prevent burn-out and ways to reach a wise old age.

What is Validation?

Validation is a tested model of practice for both professionals and caregivers working with confused older adults. The Validation worker tunes into the person's inner world by helping them restore the past by reliving good times and resolving past conflicts. Validation helps disoriented people reduce stress, enhance dignity, and increase happiness.

About Naomi Feil

Naomi Feil, M.S., A.C.S.W. is the developer of Validation. After graduating with a Masters in Social Work from Columbia, she began working with the elderly. Between 1963 and 1980, Naomi developed Validation as a response to her dissatisfaction with traditional methods of working with severely disoriented old-old people. Today there are training centers for Validation in Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Japan, Switzerland, Sweden and the United States. www.vfvalidation.org

About Pacific Coast Validation

Pacific Coast Validation is the first Authorized Validation Organization on the west coast of the United States. Pacific Coast is a subsidiary of Ridgeline Management Company. Ridgeline Management is an innovative leader in the senior housing industry, specializing in operations management of assisted living and memory care communities throughout the western and mid-western United States.

Ridgeline Management Company is dedicated to creating environments where moments of joy, independence, and wellness are the focus each and every day. We feel that Validation, as taught by Naomi Feil, is symbiotic with our mission. We, like Naomi Feil and our international colleagues, feel Validation: The Feil Method will change how we view disoriented elders. Until the world has a cure for Alzheimer-type dementia, Validation will help to bring peace to both those living with dementia, and the families that care about them.

We are Ridgeline Management Company. We are creating environments where moments of joy, independence, and wellness are the focus each and every day.

Training in Validation: The Feil Method

What is validation?

Validation, created by Naomi Feil, is a tested method of communication with elderly disoriented people that helps reduce stress, and enhance dignity and happiness. It is accepting the feelings of another person and reaching out to them with empathy.

Who needs validation?

Individuals diagnosed with Alzheimer's and related disorders who are disoriented in the later stages of life.

From the Validation Worker Course and subsequent courses you will be able to:

- be a truly empathetic listener for the elderly and anyone in your life
- be non-judgmental and build a trusting relationship with the disoriented elderly—bringing them peace, connectedness, and an improved quality of life
- identify the four phases of disorientation and the basic human needs experienced by the elderly
- use the Validation techniques at a basic level and as created for each phase of disorientation
- support others in their learning and use of Validation

Some reasons learning validation might be for you:

- You are committed to learning effective ways of communicating with the elderly with dementia.
- You notice people are unique in their dementia and you want to expand your ability to connect with them in their unique expressions.
- You want to learn how to connect with the elderly with dementia who no longer speak.
- You have concern for the families of those you care for and want to support them in connecting with their loved ones.
- You would welcome learning in a community of people who both support and challenge you.
- You would like to learn how to deal with 'difficult behavior' such as pounding, pacing, repeating phrases, etc.
- And lastly, you have experienced Naomi Feil in person, in her books or in her videos, and you ask yourself: What do I need to learn so I can do what she does?

The Department of Human Services

In collaboration with:

The Alzheimer's Association, Northwest Ohio Chapter

What is Validation Therapy?

Validation is a tested model of practice that helps older adults who experience disorientation and memory loss to reduce stress and enhance dignity and happiness. Validation accepts the older adult who mentally returns to the past. Often, his/her retreat is not a form of mental illness or disease, it is a survival technique. They return to the past to relive the good times and resolve the bad times in this final struggle to find peace.

Purpose of the Validation Workshop:

This workshop is designed for health and human service workers, families and volunteers who wish to learn how to communicate with older adults who experience disorientation and memory loss. Its overall objectives are to restore dignity to the older adult, to teach empathy, to increase self-awareness of one's own aging and to apply Validation Techniques.

About the Presenter:

Naomi Feil, M.S., A.C.S.W., is the developer of Validation. She was born in Munich in 1932, and grew up in the Montefiore Home for the Aged in Cleveland, Ohio, where her father was the administrator and her mother, the head of the Social Service Department. After graduating with a Masters degree in Social Work from Columbia University in New York, she began working with the elderly. Between 1963 and 1980 Mrs. Feil developed Validation as a response to her dissatisfaction with traditional methods of working with older adults who experience severe disorientation. In 1982 she published her first book, Validation: The Feil Method, which was revised in 1992. Her second book, The Validation Breakthrough, was published in 1993, and updated and revised in 2002. Mrs. Feil and her husband have made many films and videos about aging and Validation. Mrs. Feil is the Executive Director of the Validation Training Institute and a popular speaker in North America and Europe.

What is Validation?

Validation is at once a theory, a practical method, and a tested model of practice.

Based on her extensive experience with older adults, Naomi Feil theorized that very old people (75+) struggle to resolve unfinished life issues before death. Their behavior is age-specific (based on Erik Erikson's developmental model that assigns different life tasks to each stage of life), not exclusively due to physical deterioration or disease. Validation identifies four progressive stages of behavior (malorientation, time confusion, repetitive motion and vegetation) that older adults use when their attempts to resolve their life issues are blocked.

Validation provides a practical method for empathizing with the life struggle, allowing painful feelings to be expressed, acknowledged and "validated" by a trusted listener. This empathy builds trust, reduces anxiety and restores dignity to the person with dementia. As the model of practice demonstrated in this workshop, Validation can provide concrete and specific things to do and say at times when the care partner doesn't know what to do or when nothing seems to work.

As taught, Validation makes it possible for the families and institutional care partners to cope with disorientation, bringing some relief from the emotional turmoil of caring for persons with dementia.

8:30am to 4:30pm

Sponsored by the Cascade/Coast Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association

By using Validation techniques, we are able to enter such a person's inner world by careful listening, eye contact, touch and pacing body rhythms. The person trained in Validation can help build a sense of mutual respect and trust with the disoriented person. Trust gives strength and reduces stress, thus helping to restore well-being and dignity.

Naomi Feil is a certified diplomat in clinical social work and the internationally-known executive director of the Validation Training Institute in Cleveland, Ohio. Feil is a graduate of Columbia University. Her experience includes director for group work in health care facilities for the elderly, scriptwriter for ten films on aging and adjunct instructor at Case Western Reserve University. She has written a number of books and articles on communication with the Alzheimer's patient. Ten countries besides the United States use her Validation books and films.
